

Site-Specific Wilderness Information Resources

Consider these guiding questions while gathering information resources for your park's wilderness area.

1. What books, periodicals, or websites have information or inspirational writings about your wilderness area?
Where can such references be located?
2. Are there local organizations that are involved in managing or advocating for your wilderness area?
Are there any organizations that oppose wilderness?
3. What local sources have information about your wilderness area?
4. Are there any training opportunities on wilderness offered in your park? If so, how can one attend?
If not, how can such training be scheduled?
